Cycle Group to Improve Public Image

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The "vroom" is out with the Viking Riders II motorcycle club and the club has started a public relations campaign to improve its image.

Even the name has changed — it used to be Ghost Riders.

The drive to improve the image began when police cracked down on motorcyclists in general.

Viking Riders now pay $5 membership fees and $1 weekly dues. Ten cent fines are collected from every member who swears during a meeting.

Dollar fines are levied against Riders who race while wearing the club insignia. A third violation means expulsion from the club.

Noise is out.

Even a factory-installed muffler is changed if it's too loud.

The police department determines how much noise is noisy.

Viking Riders donate blood.

Istanbul, with a population of 1.5 million, is the largest city in Turkey.

press. Yet Greeks who can read French, German, Italian or English have their choice of foreign newspapers and magazines. Editorials in many of these publications roast the new regime.

There are noticeably fewer tourists than usual. One agency report a 70 per cent drop in bookings since the coup. But the Greeks seem to be making the best of the situation and waiting warily for what is to come.

There is no doubt that many of the 8.5 million Greeks are bitter about the ending of democracy, the summer imprisonment of some 7,000 persons for political reasons and the arbitrary control over everyone's life.

But like the man in the joke, the people who feel their feet are being stepped on are very careful about who they complain about.

The investigator for the Athens military court announced the arrest of George Bertos, a Greek journalist and former adviser to ex-Premier George Papandreu's press and information service, on charges of stealing secrets of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and spying for Papandreu's son Andreas.

The investigator, Capt. Spyridon Mellistas, said Bertos, 33, was accused of trying to find out for the younger Papandreu whether nuclear warheads were stored in Greece. He said Bertos also was accused of taking secret NATO documents while the elder Papandreu was premier in 1964.

Andreas Papandreu is in an Athens jail on charges that he was a leader of the Aspidota plot to overthrow the monarchy, set up a Socialist state and take Greece out of the North Atlantic alliance. He and his father, Greece's leading left-wing politician, were the chief targets of the military coup.

Crime No. 1 U.S. Threat

— McClellan

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., said Monday crime in the streets is the greatest threat to the United States and that the trend must be changed "if the United States is to survive."

McClellan said law enforcement officers must contend with low pay and public apathy among other things and that the incentive to officers must be restored.

McClellan said he would do all in his power to get a constitutional amendment enacted which would nullify the effects of recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings have had on law enforcement.

"There must be a constitutional amendment to change the recent crime rulings of the Supreme Court," McClellan told the Arkansas Bankers Association.

He told the group he felt the standard of ethics of the banking industry had never been higher but warned the bankers to remain on guard.

McClellan said legislation which was a result of his Senate investigations committee had removed unwanted persons attempting to gain a foothold in the banking industry.

J. C. Reeves of Pine Bluff, president of the association, praised the manner in which banks had combatted a possible money panic last year. He said the worst is over now.

Marrying of Priests Put to a Poll

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 7,000 Roman Catholic priests in the New York area are being polled on whether priests should be allowed to marry.

The Rev. Rbert T. Francoeur, spokesman for an unofficial group called the Metropolitan Coordinating Committee, said the committee began Monday to mail out cards asking a "yes," "no," or "no opinion" response to three questions:

"Do you favor a change to optional celibacy for the diocesan clergy?"

"Do you favor a request to the Synod of Rome by the National Conference of American Bishops that the conference be empowered to introduce optional celibacy in the United States?"

"Do you favor the readmission to active ministry to those married priests who wish to return to the priestly ministry?"

Father Francoeur said the approximately 15 committee members hoped to use results of the poll to "convince the American bishops that changing the celibacy requirements for priests is a pressing problem."

behavior of the United States, backed by the British, has stirred up European feelings. The war that is raging and developing in Asia perhaps may have also contributed to it.

De Gaulle's remarks were a mixture of criticism of Britain and its possible role in Europe and sympathy for the British attempt to get into continental life.

"We take note with sympathy the British application to the Common Market," de Gaulle said. "There has never been any question of a veto."

De Gaulle himself blackballed Britain's original membership bid in 1963.

But he said the obstacles to Britain's joining "are formidable." He detailed a list of hurdles he felt Britain must surmount before it could hope to become a member of the Common Market.

Jet Loss Over China Probable

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says a U.S. Air Force jet may have crashed in Red China after being hit by North Vietnamese antiaircraft fire.

The unsolicited report from the Pentagon came Monday only a few hours after the State Department denied three-week-old Communist Chinese charges about alleged U.S. bombings of Red China.

The Pentagon statement said the plane was hit during a Monday attack on military targets near Kep, North Vietnam, about 32 nautical miles northeast of Hanoi.

The pilot of the damaged jet was last heard reporting by radio that he was "heading out," said the Pentagon. The statement said the plane's course indicated the pilot was headed toward the North Vietnam mainland China border.

Spokesmen said "heading out" could have meant the plane was dropping out of formation or that its crew was bailing out.

The Pentagon said it had no word of the plane's two-man crew.

Red China charged three weeks ago that U.S. planes bombed territory north of the North Vietnamese borders and that two planes were shot down.

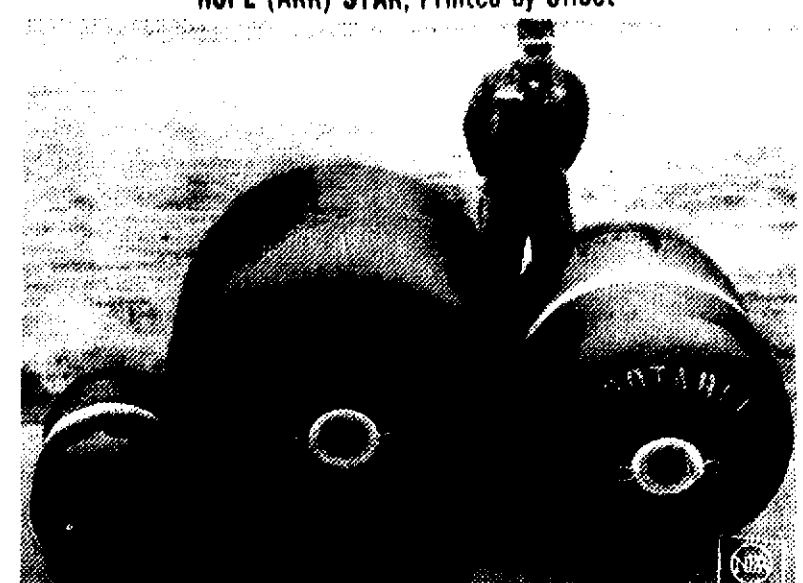

"There's no evidence that ordnance from American planes landed on, or came to fall on, Chinese Communist territory," newsmen were told at that time by Robert J. McCloskey, State Department press officer.

Asked if U.S. planes had been shot down over Red China, he had replied: "I'm advised that careful investigation does not support those charges."

McCloskey would not comment publicly on Red Chinese charges alleging overflights by U.S. planes.

But U.S. officials have said privately for some time that accidental overflights of Red China were likely in view of the speed of U.S. planes and the short distance between some North Vietnamese targets and Communist China's border.

In Saigon, sources said pilots with targets near the border are instructed to avoid at all costs coming down on Red Chinese soil. Planes also are supposed to avoid a 25-mile zone directly south of the border, the sources said.

COLLAPSIBLE CONTAINERS are receiving wide use in Vietnam military operations, for transporting water or fuel to combat units. Advantages over metal drums include lighter weight per gallon of lading, and smaller storage space required when the containers are emptied and collapse to just 15 per cent of their filled size. Slung under the belly of a helicopter, they can be rushed to a unit that would take hours to reach by truck. From left, containers shown here include a 50-gallon, 500-gallon and 250-gallon container, all made by Uniroyal.

of internal trouble.

Yet, ominous as Chou's warning was, it has to be looked at two ways — a perilous burden for any administration officials trying to plan for the war ahead with North Vietnam.

In the first place, Chou was saying he can play it any which way. Red China can intervene on invitation from North Vietnam or Red China might decide to intervene, even if North Vietnam didn't want it to, for its own reasons.

This is pretty good psychology if he feels that by deepening American uncertainty about Red China's intentions he can make the Americans supercautious, and as a result perhaps ineffective, in fighting the war with North Vietnam.

For he raised this at a time when critics of the war in this country are urging a pause in the bombing and raising the specter of Chinese intervention if the United States keeps on intensifying the war.

In short, intended or not, he is giving the critics gristly support to serve his own purpose which is to see the United States reduce its war effort, a move that very well might enable the North Vietnamese to continue fighting indefinitely.

But his warning, instead of softening the American determination, may harden it. As U.S. casualties increase, American impatience with restraint will increase since this country is carefully avoiding anything like an all-out effort.

If the mood here hardens, it will take into consideration the possibility of Chinese intervention and, in the face of that, decide to go ahead, make the war tougher, risk war with China, and handle that problem when it comes.

Perhaps the most gruesome part of Chou's statement was his warning that should the war be fought through and North Vietnam decides to quit, the Chinese may step in if they don't like the peace terms.

Who on this side at this point could possibly feel sure any kind of peace terms would be acceptable to Red China? The very uncertainty of this, and the overhanging threat, may by itself toughen the American mood.

Chou didn't simplify anything. He complicated it, which is probably what he wanted to do since at this moment he may feel uncertainty is the best weapon to use against the United States by dividing American thinking.

$325,000 for Memoirs of Svetlana

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 NEW YORK (AP) — The Book-of-the-Month club has paid $325,000 for the right to distribute the memoirs of Svetlana Alliluyeva, the daughter of Joseph Stalin.

It is reportedly the largest sum ever paid by a book club in such a purchase.

Axel Rosin, the club president, said Monday the previous high was the $250,000 it paid for rights to William Manchester's "Death of a President."

Miss Alliluyeva's memoirs are scheduled to be published Oct. 16 by Harper & Row.

Loses Control of Car, Is Killed

DIXIE, Ark. (AP) — Walter S. Brown, 78, of Brinkley, was killed Monday night when his car went out of control on Arkansas Highway 33 near here.

State Police said Brown's car hit a bridge. Dixie is in the southern portion of Woodruff County.

Note Bomb Clue in Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A crudely written note demanding $75,000 held a clue today to the bomb threat which sent some 2,500 guests scurrying out of seven hotels in three states.

Guests at plush hotels in Nevada, California and Arizona were evacuated Monday after a homemade bomb containing four tubes of black powder was found in a 12th-floor room at the Sahara Hotel here.

The note found with the bomb demanded $75,000 for revealing the location of explosive devices supposedly planted in other hotels owned by the Del E. Webb Corp. But searchers were unable to find any other bombs.

The note warned: "The bomb inside this closet is not movable in any direction and is set to explode in exactly five hours from the time you are notified of its presence."

Demolition experts, after lining the room with sandbags, mattresses and pillows, pulled the bomb off the wall with a long rope and then rendered it harmless.

Navigation to Market State Goal

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — E. S. Stephens, president of the Arkansas-Oklahoma Coal Operators Association, told an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing Monday that navigation of the Arkansas River will allow the association to open coal reserves in Eastern Oklahoma to commercial production.

The association is composed of five companies.

Stephens, vice president of the Garland Coal and Mining Company of Fort Smith, said his company had agreed to deliver to industrial firms in Japan one million tons of coal annually, beginning in 1969.

Stephens said his company plans to build its own barge terminal.

The hearing was ducted by ICC Examiner Alvin H. Schutrum of Washington. The hearing is being held in an attempt to determine how much barge line service will be needed when the 450-mile Arkansas River navigation channel is completed.

River navigation is to reach Little Rock and Pine Bluff late in 1968. It is to reach Fort Smith in 1969 and Tulsa, Okla., in 1970.

Maurice D. Dyer, manager of traffic and transportation for the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce, said the hearing may last as long as two weeks. He said over 90 witnesses are scheduled to appear.

Negro Is Added to WR Staff

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A Negro secretary has gone to work in the office of Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller.

She is Mrs. Wanda Hamilton, a native of Fort Smith and wife of an employee of the anti-poverty program. She attended Philadelphia Smith College and Little Rock University.

She is one of three secretaries in the main secretarial room in the governor's office.

a provocateur," an informed source said. "But no one thinks we can pull off any substantial change with rhetoric. I'm going to push with them not to get sidetracked with these traumatic events, that the organization not get sidetracked with these ephemeral, eye-catching, dramatic things."

This referred to the black power slogan vocalized last summer by Carmichael during the Mississippi march and the resulting debate within Negro leadership and losses in white support.

A close associate of SNCC's former chairman said Carmichael voluntarily gave up the post because he did not want to build a "personality cult" for himself. This fits with a long-standing distaste within SNCC membership for symbolic figures.

A leading role will be taken by the new program director, Ralph Featherstone, 27, veteran SNCC field worker who spent much of 1966 in tiny Philadelphia, Miss., and once taught school in Washington, D.C.

Featherstone, a quiet, slender man, talked of the need for "positive efforts in terms of establishing economic control by the black communities." The economic emphasis, he said, will be added to SNCC's political organization efforts — such as the third-party project in Alabama's Lowndes County.

Pope Gives Nod to the Conservative

By BENNET M. BOLTON
VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul's pilgrimage to Fatima Saturday was a gesture of encouragement to Catholic conservatives smarting from the thrust of church progressives in an era of rapid change.

All men could agree on his major appeal for peace. But most other aspects of his trip to Portugal held special appeal for Catholics who are traditional in church practice and conservative in politics.

Observers of the Vatican considered the trip a swing to the opposite pole after the criticism of capitalism in the Pope's encyclical, "Development of Peoples."

The Pope went to a shrine linked in Catholic minds with fear of communism. The apparitions of the Virgin Mary reported at Fatima in 1917 by three shepherd children are associated with prayer for the Soviet Union's conversion and preoccupation over Communist peril.

Pope Paul emphasized this when he spoke about lands where religion is oppressed. That was in contrast with the Vatican's steadily growing effort to get along with the Communist governments of Eastern Europe.

The Pope's trip paid special homage to the Virgin Mary, whom all Catholics venerate. But liberal members of the church generally regard the emphasis of Marian societies as a devotionism that is easily distorted.

The Pope's presence at Fatima also implied the church's highest blessing on the cult surrounding a "miraculous" happening which many progressive Catholics do not accept.

The Fatima apparitions have ecclesiastical approval but are not a mandatory article of faith, meaning that Catholics are free to accept or reject them. Several leading Catholic theologians question the authenticity of the apparitions at Fatima 50 years ago.

None of the Pope's public speeches to Portugal's leaders praised Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar's dictatorship. Instead they were filled with references to the Portuguese people. But Salazar is bound to have gained from being seen with the Pope and spending 10 minutes alone with him in private conversation.

In analyzing the effects of the trip, Vatican specialists wrote that the church includes conservatives as well as progressives, and the Pope must be Pope of them all.

Musician Is Slain With Baseball Bat

NEW YORK (AP) — A killer with a baseball bat pounded the life out of elderly musician Fred Cavi in his Greenwich Village apartment.

Two boys passing his open door Sunday discovered the body of Cavi, 71, a onetime piano and accordion player with the Freddy Martin orchestra and holder of the Silver Star for heroism during World War I, police said.

Doctor Will Repeat Lindy Ocean Flight

BARBOURVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Dr. Francis X. Sommer will soon be perched above candy bars and fishhooks for 18,000 miles—all for a flying idol he may never meet.

The Barbourville surgeon will shut the door of his single-engine plane in New York Thursday, then head across the Atlantic in memory of "Lucky Lindy."

Forty years ago Saturday, Charles A. Lindbergh did the same thing—and Dr. Sommer wants to celebrate that flight.

After Paris, another leg will take his plane "Mike Dog" in reverse of the Great Circle route Lindbergh and his wife, Ann Morrow, pioneered from New York to Tokyo.

Dr. Sommer never met Lindbergh.

"Never tried to," he said. "It was enough to read his story called 'Spirit of St. Louis' in a magazine back in 1953. By the fourth installment, I was hooked."

So the 54-year-old Harvard graduate took his practice, wife and two children from Boston to Kentucky, began logging his first air time in the "better flying location" and now pilots his fifth plane.

Dr. Sommer has lost 40 pounds, and his copilot Dr. John Rieber a similar amount, in anticipation of a partial fast during the journey. The doctors have spent more than $12,000 for the venture. The candy bars and fishhooks join maps and life jackets and other gear stuffed in emergency packs beneath seats in case of emergency.

The flight, considered daring in a flying circles because of the single engine, may take the two through a regular airway over Da Nang in central South Vietnam, en route to Hong Kong.

"The Marines have made it pretty pacified country now," he said. "But you can't tell what tomorrow will bring, so we have another route too."

"Mike Dog" is to wing non-stop from Tokyo to Pt. Barrow, Alaska, a total of 3,326 miles for the longest distance, and 2,950 miles more from Pt. Barrow to New York.

Besides cutting it a bit close, there are no fuel gauges to show an empty tank—so the two will have to wait for a sputtering sound from the engine before switching to a full tank.

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT! This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help Us, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush off.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help Us! this newspaper. ANOTHER WORD FOR IT?

When you get past 16, you outgrow certain words, like "teen," and "boyfriend," and "girlfriend." But what other words can you use in their places?

You'd think that the American language would produce something besides "young adults," or "gentleman-lady friend"—some in-between words for those who aren't quite adult and aren't engaged.—ELDERLY TEEN

Dear E. Teen: Why don't you get busy and coin first step toward delinquency? Some words to describe yourself? I agree, you're outgrown stamp out "sweat shops." But now the kids need good, honest "sweat of the brow." How do others feel about this?—P.G.

Dear P: Thousands of 13 to 16 year-olds are with you all the way. "How can we find work when they won't let us work?" is a question I hear constantly. Comments, anyone?—H.

Hope Bobcats In Finals Track & Golf

By RALPH ROUNTON
Meeting bad luck in their grand finale, the Hope High track and golf representatives still gave respectable performances in their state championships.
Freshman John Spraggins fell sick before his 440 race in the Meet of Champs in Little Rock. He tried gamely anyway, but finished fourth in a time of 53.2. The winner, Gregory of Hot Springs Southwest, broke Spraggins' overall state record of 51.7 with a time of 51.5. Later John tried the 220 dash but could only manage an eighth-place finish.
The Hope High golf team, composed of senior Lee Fenwick and freshman Ralph Rounton, combined in the team division for an 11th place in a field of 30. Fenwick also finished 6th out of 59 in the individual division and Rounton placed 18th out of the 59 competition. Catholic High of Little Rock took the team title, and Conway won the medalist competition.

New Court Round for Cassius

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge was to hold a hearing today on new motions by lawyers for Cassius Clay to delay the boxer's trial on criminal charges of draft evasion and to open Selective Service files for use in preparing his defense.
Lawyers Hayden Covington of New York and Quinlan Hodges of Houston filed motions Monday in federal district court in Houston and before a panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals sitting in Jacksonville, Fla.
The Jacksonville petition sought a delay of Clay's June 5 trial in Houston in the criminal indictment against him until the civil suit Clay brought against his draft board is settled before the Appeals Court in its October sitting. Hodges said Monday night the petition had been denied.
The Houston motions seek a continuance of the trial from June 5, alleging that it is "physically and humanly impossible" for the lawyers to make ready by that date.
Clay's defense will be based in part upon an allegation that draft boards are weighted with white members and exclude Negroes.
On April 28 in Houston, his adopted hometown, the boxer refused to take the Army oath as a draftee. He claimed military exemption as Muhammad Ali, Muslim minister. Within hours, he was stripped of his world heavyweight title and on May 8, a federal grand jury in Houston returned the indictment against him.

Boston Adds Height to Forwards

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Bruins, weary of seeing small forwards get banged around, boasted added muscle up front today with the acquisition of Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge and Fred Stanfield from the Chicago Black Hawks.
The Bruins gave up hard-hitting defenseman Gilles Marotte, center Pit Martin and minor league goalie Jack Norris to obtain the three forwards in the deal completed shortly before National Hockey League rosters

Prentice Is Winner of Dallas Open

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
Associated Press Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Jo Ann Prentice, the tall blonde from Pensacola, Fla., won the $16,800 Dallas Civitan Open Golf Tournament Monday and became a strong endorser of chewing gum and a certain cold drink.
She chewed gum for the first time — three sticks during the final round — and found it helped her nerves. The cold-drink stand stopped her ball when, needing a par to win the tournament, she fired over the green on No. 18.
She was 30 feet off the green and would have been out of bounds except for the convenient cold-drink stand. She chipped to within 18 inches of the hole, sank the putt for a par and a four-over-par 75 and 281 for 72 holes.
It was just a stroke more than the pressing Judy Kimball, who had birdied 18 with an 18-inch putt. This put it all up to Miss Prentice, who followed in the next threesome. Miss Kimball wound up with a 73 for 282.
Miss Prentice won $2,475 to vault from eighth to fifth place among the year's leading money winners. Sandra Haynie, who had 291 and won $386, continued as No. 1 with $6,296.
Kathy Whitworth finished third with 283, won $1,540 and pulled into second place with $5,940.
"Maybe you'll get on the payroll of the chewing gum manufacturer and the cold-drink people for giving them this plug," someone told the smiling Miss Prentice as she relaxed from the tension of winning her first tournament in three years.
Miss Prentice's 281 tied the record for the tournament. She also said wind that gusting up to 25 miles per hour bothered her some.

They were frozen at midnight in preparation for the expansion draft.
"We gained needed strength up front as well as size," Milt Schmidt said after his first trade as the Bruins' new general manager.
"We hated to give up Marotte, a promising, tough, young defenseman, but we had to give up something to get what we wanted," Schmidt added.
Esposito, who packs 187 pounds on a 6-foot frame, tied for seventh among the NHL's top scorers the past season. The 25-year-old center scored 21 goals and had 40 assists for 61 points while playing on a line with Bobby Hull and Chico Maki.
The Bruins finished last in the 1966-67 season, Chicago won the NHL championship, but was eliminated by Toronto in the Stanley Cup semifinals.

Reds Edge Pirates by 8 to 7

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer
The Pittsburgh Pirates were marking time until Roberto Clemente's next trip to the plate. But Cincinnati's Tony Perez got there first, leaving Clemente with a night to remember — and an empty feeling.
Perez' run-scoring double in the 10th inning gave the National League-leading Reds an 8-7 victory over the Pirates — and nullified the biggest single-game spree of Clemente's career.
The Pittsburgh superstar drove in all of his team's runs with three towering homers and a double, moving into the league lead in both batting and run production.
"This is the biggest day I ever had — in a game that we lost," he sighed. "I've never hit three homers in a game before. I wish we had won it."
Clemente, whose batting average soared to .390 while his RBI mark jumped to 24, socked a bases-empty homer in the ninth inning that capped the personal binge and gave the Pirates a 7-5 lead.
But Lee May's two-run homer pulled the Reds even in the bottom of the ninth and Perez' fourth hit — a booming drive to dead center field off reliever Juan Pizarro in the 10th — knocked in the winning run.
While Cincinnati moved three games ahead of the second-place Pirates, the Houston Astros ended a five-game tailspin by edging Los Angeles 5-3 on Bob Aspromonte's two-run triple in the 10th inning.
Ernie Banks' three-run homer and two-run blasts by Lee Thomas and Billy Williams carried the Chicago Cubs to a 9-3 victory over San Francisco in an afternoon game. New York and Atlanta were rained out, while two games — Baltimore at Boston and Detroit at Washington — were postponed because of rain.
Clemente lashed two-run homers off Milt Pappas in the first and fifth innings, sending Pittsburgh ahead 4-0, then doubled two runs across in the seventh before slamming his sixth homer of the year in the ninth.
The Reds scored three runs in the sixth, knocking out Pirate starter Bob Veale, and added two more in the seventh on Perez' run-scoring double and an RBI single by May.
Perez singled before May's tying homer in the ninth, then delivered the winning hit with two on in the 10th.
The Astros tagged LA relief ace Phil Regan with his first loss in almost a year. Regan had won 15 straight since last May 13.
He came on at the start of the 10th, gave up a single by Joe Morgan and retired the next two hitters before walking Rusty Staub intentionally to get at Aspromonte.
Banks' sixth homer capped a four-run wrapup burst in the ninth for the Cubs, who have won seven of their last eight starts. Williams rapped three singles in addition to his homer for a total of nine hits in his last 10 at-bats.
Kansas City extended its winning string to four games as Bert Campaneris ignited two scoring rallies with singles and rookie Tony Pierce pitched one-hit relief over the final 2-1-3 innings, preserving John (Blue Moon) Odom's first victory.

Altitude Hinders Mexican Olympics

SHELTON, Conn. (AP) — Lack of oxygen at the 1968 Mexico City Olympics may cause many athletes to pass out and may even kill some, Yale's swimming coach said Monday night.
Coach Phil Moriarty said the choice of the high-altitude city was a "political decision" brought about by maneuvering of the Mexican government.
"I fear that some (athletes) will die there," said Moriarty, speaking to the Bridgeport Traffic Association's annual sports night.

Hope Wins First Game of Tourney

By RALPH ROUNTON
Star Sports Writer
Combining good fielding with a fine pitching performance, the Hope High School baseball team won a state tourney berth by smashing Murfreesboro, 13-1, in the District 7 meet last night at Legion Field.
The locals now will paly the Belvins-Bradley winner Wednesday to determine playing positions at next week's state tourney.
Stan Reyenga and Dwight Galloway teamed for a 3-hit performance, Reyenga serving up the only run, a 330 foot shot by Steve Birchwell of Murfreesboro in the third inning.
The Bobcats struck quickly in the opening inning, pushing across three runs. After advancing two more runs over the plate in the second inning, they were held scoreless in the third and to one run in the fourth.
After a big six-run fifth inning in which 11 batters stepped to the plate winning pitcher Reyenga, who gave up 2 hits, a run, and struck out 9, was relieved by Galloway, who mowed down the rest for the final two innings, giving a hit no runs, and whiffing four batters. The Bobcats added one last run in the sixth.
Tonight Belvins and Bradley vie in the other semifinal for a shot at the state tourney berth opposite Hope. Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Legion Field.

Epstein Quits Orioles

By GORDON BEARD
Associated Press Sports Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — Mike Epstein, a talented baseball player with an offer to become a professional wrestler, heads home today for a public relations job.
The Baltimore Orioles thought the 24-year-old slugger had almost unlimited potential in baseball.
So did other clubs, who sought to swing a deal with the Orioles for the youngster who couldn't break into the Baltimore lineup.
So did Epstein, who thought he was ready this season for the major leagues and balked at being ordered back to Rochester of the International League on 24-hour recall.
Harry Dalton, the Orioles' director of player personnel, said Monday the club expected big things from Epstein in the future and would trade him this season "only if he could improve our major league club with a player of outstanding caliber."
Dalton said he sympathized with Epstein's desire to play in the major leagues now, but added, "We cannot operate our ball club to satisfy his wants alone."
But Dalton did say Epstein would be traded early next season if he had not yet made the Baltimore club.
"We sincerely feel that Mike is weakening his chances of being dealt off to another major league club by going home," Dalton said in a lengthy statement issued Monday night by the club's front office.
Dalton at the time was with the team in Boston, and Epstein was completing a visit with relatives in New York.
"The Baltimore club is not so rich in talent that it can afford to trade players because in any one year it does not have a regular position for them to play," the statement said.

Commercials in Hockey TV Criticized

TORONTO (AP) — The president of the Toronto and District Soccer Association said Monday live television coverage of soccer with fake stoppages for commercials could have an adverse effect on the game in Canada and the United States.
John Wimbs said he watched Sunday's televised game in Toronto between Pittsburgh and Toronto of the National Professional Soccer League.
"It isn't funny," he said. "It is phoney soccer we're seeing on the screen through the CBS telecasts."
"I got so fed up with the phoney fouls to allow commercials I turned the set off and went and kicked a ball with my young son."

Broken Bone Didn't Stop This Horse

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer
WESTBURY, N. Y. (AP) — Romulus Hanover, who won the $178,064 Messenger Stakes, the first leg of racing's Triple Crown, raced most of last year with a broken bone in his left front hoof.
Driver Billy Haughton disclosed the fact Monday in the wake of his colt's decisive 2¼-length victory over Best of All in record time of 1:59 1-5 Saturday night in harness racing's richest race.
"I haven't told many about it, but Romulus raced most of last year with a broken bone in his front hoof," Haughton said. "In fact, I didn't tell the owner about it until Christmas."
He referred to John Froehlich, master of Farmstead Acres of Glen Head, N.Y., owner of the 3-year-old pacer.
"It happened up at Vernon Downs last July," Haughton said. "He finished sixth in the Meadowslands Farm, a 2-year-old early closer. An X-ray showed a small bone broken in his left front hoof."
"I asked the doc, 'What do we do?' he replied 'Don't do anything. He isn't lame.'"
Romulus finished eighth in his next start at Buffalo Raceway on Aug. 2, showing a tendency to duck for the rail. He won his next two starts at the Meadows and Yonkers. He then finished his 2-year-old career with four straight victories, apparently fully recovered.

"There are quite a few players in our organization, both at a major and minor league level, who are not playing regularly for the Orioles, but could be regulars on other big league clubs."
A source in New York said Epstein reiterated his plan to call it quits, and said he would begin driving to the West Coast today.
Pending further word from Epstein, the Rochester team will place him on the suspended list, and halt payment on his salary, estimated at about $9,000 for the 1967 season.

He said commercials should be restricted to halftone or else an announcement should be made to the crowd that the game is being held up for a commercial.
"The part of the game I watched Sunday I noticed many false stoppages. I said to my wife, 'Here comes another commercial' and sure enough a player would fall to the ground."
He said potential soccer players watching the televised matches could be turned away from the sport.
"The standard of play isn't worthy of a North American audience which is composed of experts on one side and people ignorant of the sport on the other. I think the CBS coverage of the game is killing it before it starts."

Crawford in New 2-Mile State Mark

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Harding's standout distance performer, Jim Crawford, lopped almost one-half minute off the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference two-mile record in the conference meet here Monday night.
Crawford ran 9:00.4 in the two-mile after qualifying for the mile (4:26.1) and the 880-yard run (1:57.9). The record, set in 1966 by Richard Richardson of State College of Arkansas, was 9:27.1.
Southern State sprinter Jackie Seale broke one conference record and set another in the preliminaries. Seale ran 21.6 in the 220-yard dash and 9.7 in the 100. George Eriquez of SSC set the 220 mark of 21.8 last year. Eriquez also set the 100-yard dash record last season.
Freshman Elgin Stokes of SSC tied the 440-yard dash mark of 48.4.
Only three events were completed Monday. Harding had 21 points, followed by Southern State with 8. State College scored 6 as did Henderson and Arkansas A&M had 5.
The finals in the other events will be held Tuesday night.
Harding, Southern State and State College were picked as the three conference favorites. Southern State's strength is in the relays and sprints.

First Columbus Settlers Came Up From Louisiana About 1808

Maurin Brothers First; Clark, Stuart Families 1810-1818

Here Is Recounted Early Pioneer Sporting Event—A Bear Fight

THE BRUNSON TRIAL

But Opposition Witnesses Were Loath to Give the Wrong Answer

By Virginia Fitzsimmons Hicks

The story of Columbus, in north Hempstead county, may be likened to the most colorful novel. The history, both early and in later days of this aristocratic place is overflowing with romance and adventure.

Antedating the advent of the first white settlers in this section of the country, the spot where Columbus now stands was once a Choctaw Indian village. These peaceful Indians are intimately connected with the early history of the town.

According to the best information obtainable, the first white settlers to establish homes at the historical place were Rueben and Abner Maurin, from Maurinsport, La., in 1808. It is believed that they came up Red river by keelboat and if this story is correct they were the first men to bring a keelboat around the "rafts" of driftwood that were on Red river.

First Two Homes
These two men established homes, then built a blacksmith shop and a horse mill for grinding corn. They made their living trading with the Indians.

The next mention of emigrants is in about 1810 when Benjamin Clark, who had married Hilda Anthony from Hopkinsville, Ky., settled at Mound Prairie. Shortly afterwards in 1812 James M. Stuart, followed in 1818 by Samuel Hopson and his brother Abraham, settled on the mound from which Mound Prairie got its name. With Abraham Stuart were his wife, about ten or eleven sons and daughters, and his mother who was the former Elizabeth Fulkerson from Virginia. His mother was the ruler of this clan and lived to be one hundred and ten.

William Stuart, Abraham's brother, came as far west with them as Arkansas Post, where he had turned north toward Lawrence county.

A Family Chronicle
The children of Abraham Stuart grew up and married as follows:
Lounetta married Judge William Trimble.
Lucetta married Edward Johnson, Jr.

Lucetta married John S. Cannon.
Lucinda married Samuel Hopson.
Rebecca married William Ward.
Emily married Henry Conway.
Joseph married Mildred Hopson.
George W. married Bessie Carr (2nd wife Mrs. Murrell).
James M. married Miss Grayson (2nd wife Mrs. Johnson).

John married Katie Grayson.
In these early days there were very few callings into which a young man had access, these being a Minister, Doctor, Lawyer or Farmer. The trades had very little to offer in the way of positions and there was hardly any demand for them in the early settlements.

Lucetta, who married Edward Johnson built a home right on what later was to become the "Old Military Road." In 1836, when President Jackson was transporting the Indians west, Mr. Johnson got the contract with the government to feed the Indians as they passed on their trek west. When a runner would arrive telling of a tribe that were on the way, Mr. Johnson would have so many steers ready, also corn and what other commodities they might desire or he could obtain. The Indians were very fond of his butter and would make this a stopover on their westward march. In this way Mr. Johnson and his wife Lucetta, acquired quite a lot of money during the Indian migration.

Another story of James Monroe who was quite an athlete, is recounted. Monroe, as he was called, loved to fight, not that he was a but he was rough, he merely loved to prove his strength. One time made the boast that he believed he could kill a bear given an equal chance, and he was later given an opportunity to prove this.

One day while out hunting with his brother-in-law, Mr. Grayson, Monroe in some way got separated from him and a bear attacked him. Mr. Grayson who was with a horse saw him get to a tree and draw his dirk. Then the fight was on. Dodging around the tree each time the bear charged and stabbing him with his dirk, Monroe finally succeeded in killing the bear before it had an opportunity to hurt him much. After making sure of his conquest, Monroe turned to his brother-in-law and said: "Now I'm going to kill you for not killing that bear!" To which Mr. Grayson replied: "Why you always boasted you could kill a bear given an equal chance and you had it; you had your dirk and the bear had his claws and you've made good your boast. I had a head on him all the time and could have killed him if he had been getting the better of you."

R. C. Stuart Tells History
R. C. Stuart, of Columbus, is one of the best informed men on the early history of this place. He turned over for The Star's perusal quite a few old papers and ledgers dating back to the very beginning of Columbus. One of the most interesting relics was an old ledger of about 1835, which was the property of Ephraim Myrick & Moss. This ledger was kept by Simon T. Sanders, who was clerk of Hempstead county for thirty-six years, a record of Arkansas.

This book shows that there were eighty persons of this firm, which will give some idea of the development at this early date. The bookkeeper, Mr.

Sanders, was also the first postmaster of the first postoffice established February 11, 1835.

This firm handled all necessary articles together with a few so-called "fancy" lines, such as Hats at $10.00, and Vests at $8.00. The sale of fancy drinks such as wines, cordials, etc., indicate the wealthy class there. Supplies were brought from the nearest river port, either Fulton or Tyra Hill at Camden. Mr. Stuart says he can recall when the big six-mule team wagons would be seen coming in from a trip he and as he said it "together with the other little niggers on the place" would run to meet them in order to get the streams of tar hanging from the axels of the wagons. These wagons had wooden axels and were greased with tar, the tar bucket always hung behind. The reason why the children were so anxious to get the tar was because they could use it in place of chewing gum, thus the expression "Swapping Tar."

Myrick & Moss closed their business at Columbus and moved to Washington in 1837.
Prior to this, however, a Mr. Cotton came to Columbus in 1836 and built a two-story building and operated a store there for two years. This building was built of whip-sawed lumber. After two years though, he was found mysteriously murdered upstairs one night and his store robbed.

First Exchange

At about this same time Dr. James H. Walker, a graduate of West Point and a physician with Mr. Greenville A. Cheatham and a Matthew V. Cheatham built a huge two-story building together with a large warehouse. This firm known as Walker & Cheatham bought most of Cottons stock of goods and moved most of it to their new building. These men came to Columbus with some money and evidently unlimited credit. They started the first exchange in the town and, of course, this was a big step in progress. The farmers could bring their cotton to the firm and get credit for so many bales of cotton. Should any of them want to go to New Orleans then Walker & Cheatham would give them a letter of credit on the New Orleans Exchange. They would get supplies twice a year and when these supplies came up the rivers it would take all the wagons in the country to transport them to Columbus.

In 1836 Colonel Abraham Stuart died and this was the beginning of a long drawnout court fight. Abraham had left his property to his second wife, who had no children and his children immediately set in to break the will. Joseph Stuart asked for letters of administration and posted a $50,000 bond. The widow Stuart resisted and employed Albert Pike and posted $100,000 bond. In the meantime the circuit clerk James M. Stuart had died and Col. Stuart had been instrumental in having Allen M. Oakley, a nephew appointed to succeed him. In spite of the "thunderings of Pike" family ties were too strong and the Colonel's sons and daughters induced Oakley to disqualify himself and have his deputy accept bond as first offered by Joseph Stuart. Thus the will was finally broken, and the property sold. The Hempstead County Court of Records show that a year before his death, Colonel Stuart was the heaviest tax payer in Hempstead county. The records also show that Dr. James H. Walker was the biggest slave owner and heaviest tax payer in 1860.

In this same year, 1836, Dr. Walker bought the old Cotton store building and had it moved close to his store, and remodeled into an eight room dwelling. Ever since the night of the murder of Cotton this old building had had the reputation of being haunted and no young people would stay upstairs alone at night. Dr. Walker kept adding to this house until at his death there were 18 rooms.

Voodoo and "Haints"

The explanation of the "haints" turned out to be very simple in one sense and rather gruesome in another. Dr. Walker owned a slave. Old Aunt Rose, whom he had bought directly off a slave ship, and this old negro brought much of her African lore and Voodooism with her. Though Dr. Walker built her a cabin and gave her enough to furnish it she never gave up her strange ways. In all the time that she lived there she was never known to be in bed. Instead of going to bed she would go to "roost" like a chicken in the strangest places like the carriage house and other outbuildings. She would utter the most awful screams and other weird African noises and kept the other negroes scared to death. It finally evolved that Aunt Rose was the one who had put chains and bells up in the attic of the Cotton house and she would slip up there and ring them and rattle the chains. Dr. Walker probably employed her witchcraft in helping to keep order among the other slaves.

Later in 1878 Mr. R. C. Stuart's father Mr. Crit Stuart, bought the place and Mr. Stuart tells how at night sometimes they would hear footsteps and other ghostly noises until his father investigated. He found that the rats were rattling the chains and ringing the bells and that when a fire was lighted downstairs it would cause the lumber just above adjacent to the chimney to "come and go" as lumber men say and this made it sound like footsteps.

In Slavery Days

Another story that will show the kind attitude that existed between the masters and slaves is the one about Old Mom Hussy. Mom Hussy had much to do with the raising of Dr. Henry Walker and after they moved to Columbus, he had her a nice little cabin to herself, she did not live back in the slave quarters. Th old well known as the Mom Hussy well is still standing right in front of Mr. Stuart's house which by the way was the old Walker home.

It was the custom during these times that when a young couple married if there were any slaves on either side that were so attached to either the bride or groom that they wanted to go with them, the older people would give them to the young couple. However, if none of the negroes wanted to go the couple got no slaves. This was to teach the young people kindness toward their slaves. When Dr. Walker's daughter, Isabella, married Rufus K. Garland, old Mom Hussy's daughter wanted to go with the bride so Dr. Walker gave her to the young lady. Not long after they were settled in their new home Mr. Garland persuaded his bride to trade Isabella for a fine stallion. No sooner had it happened than the news reached Mom Hussy over the grapevine telegraph. When she learned her daughters fate, Mom ran screaming to Dr. Walker and forgetting herself she lapsed back to the days of his childhood and cried "Oh Henry, Henry dey don't swap my girl for a stud horse. Picking the grief-stricken old woman up in his arms Dr. Walker carried her back to her cabin and assured her that she would have her daughter back before night. Calling one of his men he immediately sent after the girl with instructions that the man bring her back at any price. That evening, true to his promise, the girl was back on Dr. Walker's place with her mother.

Dr. R. A. Brunson

In 1840 a man came to Columbus named Dr. Robert Atherton Brunson. After he had been between the states the Republicans placed a man named Baker as postmaster in Columbus. Dr. Brunson and Baker had a fight in which Brunson was badly wounded and Baker was killed. The Federalists stationed there at that time immediately put Brunson under arrest. He was carried off his home and a captain and two lieutenants were left to guard him. At attending physicians insisted that Dr. Brunson must be kept absolutely quiet and no one allowed to see him until his condition improved. The guards stationed in the hall just outside his door were highly entertained by Dr. Brunson's charming daughter. His meals were carried to him regularly but no one allowed in his room to see him. This went on for about two weeks when the Captain demanded to see him. Dr. Brunson's daughter went to her father's door, threw it open and said "Gentleman Dr. Brunson has been gone a week." His son had led his horse up to the window and Dr. Brunson had mounted him from there and calmly ridden away one night. He later returned and stood trial where he was promptly acquitted. This was one of the famous big trials of Washington.

In the trial of Dr. Brunson the Republican Administration was to introduce a lot of negro testimony. This was water on the doctor's wheel as he had one of his old slave and a leader of the negroes to sit where the witnesses could see both of his feet. When a question was asked by the State the witness looking at this old negroes feet answered "yes" if he patted his right foot and "no" if he patted his left.

Dr. Brunson had a big negro stevedriver named Steve. Steve was so big and so strong that Dr. Brunson had ordered him never to strike an ox with his fist. He would almost have killed it. One day Dr. Brunson ordered Steve to hitch up the oxen and get a wagon bed about a mile on a highway. When he came out of his office he saw that the oxen were still in the lot and he never hitched up. He immediately showed ed for Steve for an explanation. One of the other negroes said "Yoner he comes Marse, Look!" Dr. Brunson turned an beheld Steve coming down the road with the ox-wagon bed perched on his head. Dr. Brunson gave one look and said "Well, I'll be damned!"

Robert Manton Wilson

Squire Robert Manton Wilson, came to Columbus and established a home in about 1840. He was a Presbyterian and Orthodox in faith. He demanded strict obedience from his children and it is told that when he went deer hunting and took one of his sons he would station him on a deer stand and if the boy shot at a deer and didn't kill it he would take the ramrod out of his gun and whip the boy. He said he took his son to shoot deer, not to shoot at them.

Every Sunday morning his horse and carriage was hitched at his front gate and he together with his children would climb in and the old horse would start out and go on until he came to the church at Washington where he would stop by force of habit. They would then hear a sermon by Dr. Samuel Williamson who resigned as President of Davidson College in North Carolina and settled near Mound Prairie in the 40s. His address that he made his last graduating class is in the possession of his great grand-daughter, Mrs. Jim Wilson Jr., of Columbus. Squire Robert Manton Wilson was the father of Mr. James S. Wilson.

Referring back to the year of 1836 it is interesting to note that George Hill, always spoken of as Gull Hill, was a prominent citizen of Columbus. He was one of the organizers of the Land Bank that broke so many Hempstead county citizens. He was one of the heaviest losers and died soon afterward. His wife however, who was a Miss Harpool was no clinging vine building. In after years Colonel Etter owned the property, and it then became known as the "Old Etter House." When the tocsin of war sounded in the fair Southland, the gallant men of Washington and Hempstead county were among the first to go. At this crisis, Colonel Etter's home became the rendezvous for officers, friends, Masons, lawyers—the "elite of society," who visited him on business and otherwise.

(It will be recalled that Colonel Etter published the Telegraph, and that paper furnished all the war news of the day, and especially inside the Confederate lines.)

Albert Pike's Visit

Colonel Etter and Albert Pike were close friends—both Masons—and when General Pike resigned from the army, he came to Washington and took refuge in the home of his friend, bringing with him his Masonic library, and there, in the home of Mr. Etter, the one time-tavern, he translated from foreign languages, compiled and wrote, his masterpiece of Masonic literature. In Mr. Pike's ramblings (and they covered practically every part of the globe) he always found inspiration to express himself in verse.

Washington is noted for its magnolia trees, and the largest and most beautiful one in all the land in on the lot once the home of Senator Jones. During Mr. Pike's stay here from 1862 to 1870, or thereabouts, he jotted down his "National Song," "The Magnolia."

and after his death she undertook the management of the slaves and farm and paid every dollar of the debt, leaving her slaves and land unencumbered.

At an early date Columbus has these establishments: A brick maker, Thad Clendennin, burned the first brick hill around this section. A barrel factory, Mr. Jock Stewart, manufacturing both light and flour barrels, three blacksmith shops, two furniture factories, one run by a German named Stalleup whose furniture ran to spacers, scroll and saved work. The other was an Englishman named specialized in lathe work.

A Methodist Bishop came through Columbus in 1840, on his way to Texas. He held services in the Female Academy and ordained Old Father Henry. This old Academy was used as a hospital during the war and smallpox broke out in it so the building was burned. But to get back to the Bishop, in his memoirs of the trip he writes of Columbus "It is a village of much culture, having two schools and no church." He also mentions the villages in this order. First is the village of Batesville, second Little Rock and third Columbus.

Father Henry, for whom Henry's Chapel at Mound Prairie was named, had had his deacons papers since about 1818, but this was the first time a bishop had come through to ordain him.

Mr. Stuart recalls some amusing difficulties encountered with the early schools of Columbus. Men like Dr. Walker and Mr. Cheatham would write back East for a girl teacher for the female academy, and a man for the male academy. Invariably, these new teachers would fail in love with the girls and boys of the town and marry, thus leaving the vacancy to be refilled. Finally they evolved upon a plan. Dr. Walker wrote to his relatives in North Carolina to send them the ugliest man teacher they could find. Dr. Cheatham wrote to his relatives in Tennessee for the ugliest woman teacher they could send. They came and "filled the bill." However, within six months the two teachers fell in love with each other and married. The town gave up trying then and became reconciled.

Mound Prairie was one of the first educational schools and it was built of logs, with no windows at all. One of the first teachers A. Watson was a strong believer in the "rule of 3" and ending out nines." He thought no one could write a grammar but Kircum. Every morning he had his pupils recite this doggerel: "Kircum's the book in which we look, We need not Smith nor Murry We read the rules of other schools, But in much more of a hurry."

This famous old house, on the Washington-Fulton road 3.5 miles south of the intersection with the Hope-Columbus highway, was built long ago by Bill Sandlin, great-grandfather of Hugh Jones of Hope. Its age is uncertain, but even 78 years ago it was a noted old place. Mr. Sandlin's son, Jim Sandlin, grew up there, on the Old Military Road, but the house does not appear ever to have been a tavern.

otherwise immaculate linen. His hand-writing was a holy terror to the boys in the offices, a dash, a blot, a few twists of the quill pen, made up the sum of his efforts.

E. W. Gantt bloomed out into prominence about this time. He was eloquent and ambitious.

Mr. Gantt ran against Dr. Charles B. Mitchell for congress. It was a hot race for those eventful days. He was elected, but Mitchell was fully compensated by being sent to the United States Senate immediately thereafter. Gantt's law firm was composed of himself and James R. Page. Page was a quiet fellow who could see a dollar as far off as anyone, and he always went for it in a still-hunt.

A. B. Williams was a partner of Major Hemstead. He was gentle and of a loving disposition, wrote a beautiful hand and was an able and effective lawyer. His influence was broad and his personal population was great. He later became a member of the Utah Commission. Orville Jennings came here from the North, but the feelings engendered by the approaching war made residence in Washington uncomfortable for him, and he did not stay long. But Orville Jennings is buried in the old cemetery here.

Wyatt C. Thomas, the then accomplished editor of the Telegraph, was a lawyer of good ability and a most accomplished and high strung gentleman. He was a scholar, and his editorials added tone and character to the paper.

Young and Thomas composed a firm whose office was around the corner facing the old Phillips residence. "Long" Thomas, he was called, because of his height. Wyatt C. Thomas was a quite small man. Jas K. Young afterward occupied the Circuit bench. A. T. Delony was in practice here then. Mr. Delony was a graduate of La Grange College, at La Grange, Ala., holding a diploma as bachelor of Liberal Arts, and considered one of the finest Latin, Greek and mathematic scholars in the South. He and his wife opened a private school in Washington, but later became a law partner with Judge John R. Eakin. James P. Erwin was also upon the list of lawyers here. He was a kinsman of Judge Eakin.

Billy Worsham, then a young man, was also a licentiate. He and his brother George, together with Bob Winn, were counted among the young men of the town. They owned valuable Red river farms and did not lo much except to preserve social ties. Judge Daniel T. Witter had long been a citizen, and I believe, a member of the bar; but he had become old and infirm before this period. Dan W. Jones was then just finishing his college course, and came on to a life of usefulness and fame.

Historian Noted Giant Magnolias

Fay Hemstead Wrote of Washington's Famous Trees—Planted 1843

The Star's photograph of the giant Magnolia tree at Washington, made especially for the Arkansas Centennial Edition, gains new significance when the student reads this extract from Fay Hemstead's "Pictorial History of Arkansas" (1890):

"It (Washington) is built in the hills in a soil which has a remarkable depth of sand for a hill situation, but which affords unusual growth to vegetables. Trees growing in the town are of very great size. A growth of were brought to the town and planted generally, about the year 1843, which Catalpa trees exists, the seeds of which have now attained an extraordinary size in height and girth. Magnolia trees, of about the same age, possess height of from 60 to 70 feet."

Spinal Curvature Not Cause of Back Arthritis
By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—Would there be any harmful effects from a large amount of opaque dye being left in the spinal canal after a myelogram? Would it cause headache, cramping and numbness of the legs and back?

A—Much of the opaque dye used to make X-ray studies of the spinal canal is always left behind. It is harmless and will not cause any of the symptoms you mentioned. Their cause is either worry about the dye or something you have not mentioned in your letter.

Q—I have a severe backache and curvature of the spine. Can the curvature be corrected? I am 54 years old and have worn a brace on my back for three months but it hasn't helped. My doctor wants to operate. What do you advise? Will the curvature cause arthritis?

A—Spinal curvature may be lateral (S-shaped), sway-back or humpback and may vary widely in severity. Mild degrees require no treatment. It can be corrected in childhood by means of exercises and a brace or body cast but

Fireproof Suits for Spacemen
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)—America's astronauts will wear new fire-resistant underwear and space suits made of glass when they go into space next year, a top Manned Spacecraft Center official revealed today.

Richard Johnston, chief of the Houston space center's crew systems division, said in a speech prepared for the Aviation-Space Writers Association that some pieces of the new glass fabric spacewear already have been made and are being tested.

The new fabric, called beta fabric, replaces nylon and cotton in the astronauts' clothing. Its use is a direct outgrowth of the Jan. 27 Apollo fire.

Because Johnston was unable to attend the meeting, chief space center spokesman Paul Haney read his speech. It was the first public description of the redesigned space suit.

"The beta fabric also will be substituted for cotton underwear and in other applications where nylon material is used," he said.

Q—A friend has been afflicted with Marie-Strumpell disease for 30 years. Can anything be done for this condition?

A—Ankylosing spondylitis or Marie-Strumpell disease is a chronic arthritis of the spine. It begins with a gradual stiffening of the back. Unless steps are taken to prevent deformity, the victim becomes unable to straighten up. As with any chronic disease, skillful treatment is required for the best results. Antirheumatic drugs are an important part of the management. Exercises to strengthen the back, even though they cause pain, are essential. Hot applications help to relieve pain and stiffness. Braces help to keep the spine straight and relieve muscle spasms. Regular rest periods throughout the day are also helpful. As a last resort a spinal fusion operation may be necessary to correct the deformity.

LISTEN, MEEK, YOU DON'T REALLY LOVE ME!

I DON'T?

IF YOU REALLY LOVED ME YOU WOULDN'T BE FOLLOWING ME AROUND CHECKING UP ON ME ALL THE TIME!

TRUE LOVE DOESN'T ACT THAT WAY!

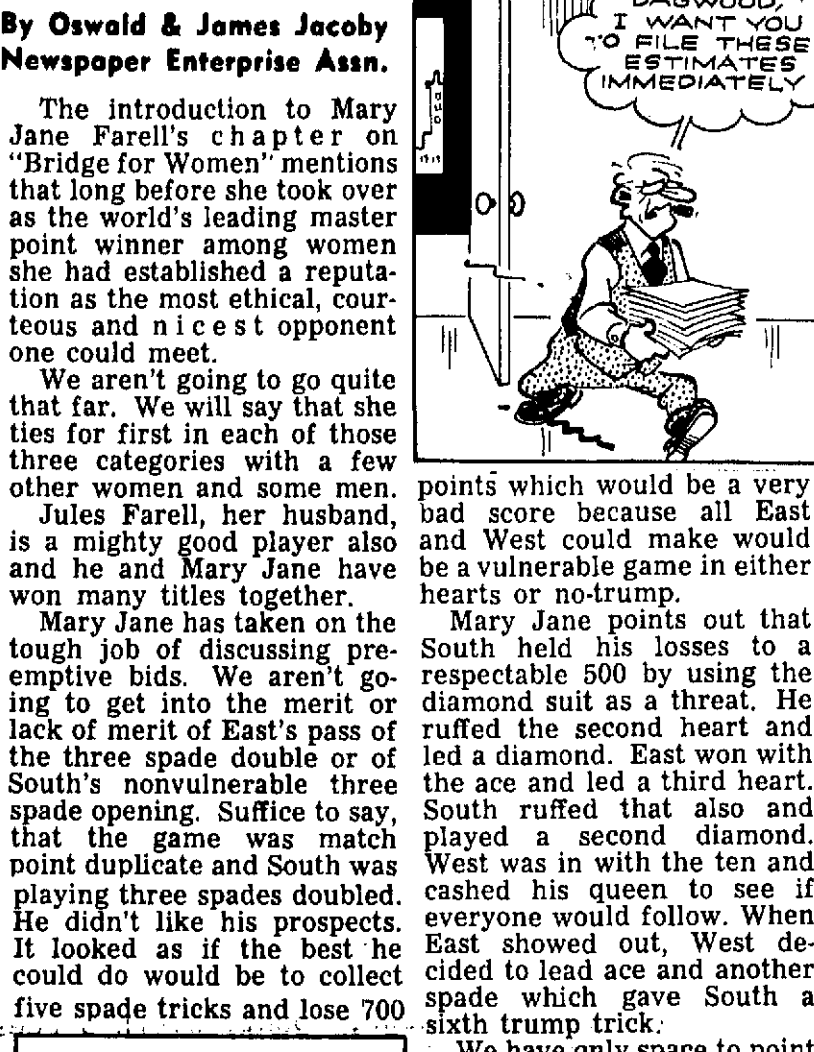

WELL, FOR A PHONY LOVE IT SURE SMARTS A LOT!

WIN AT BRIDGE By Oswald & James Jacoby Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

© 1967 by NEA, Inc. T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

The introduction to Mary Jane Farrell's chapter on "Bridge for Women" mentions that long before she took over as the world's leading master point winner among women she had established a reputation as the most ethical, courteous and nicest opponent one could meet.

We aren't going to go quite that far. We will say that she ties for first in each of those three categories with a few other women and some men.

Jules Farrell, her husband, is a mighty good player also and he and Mary Jane have won many titles together.

Mary Jane has taken on the tough job of discussing preemptive bids. We aren't going to get into the merit or lack of merit of East's pass of the three spade double or South's nonvulnerable three spade opening. Suffice to say, that the game was match point duplicate and South was playing three spades doubled. He didn't like his prospects. It looked as if the best he could do would be to collect five spade tricks and lose 700 points which would be a very bad score because all East and West could make would be a vulnerable game in either hearts or no-trump.

Mary Jane points out that South held his losses to a respectable 500 by using the diamond suit as a threat. He ruffed the second heart and led a diamond. East won with the ace and led a third heart. South ruffed that also and played a second diamond. West was in with the ten and cashed his queen to see if everyone would follow. When East showed out, West decided to lead ace and another spade which gave South a sixth trump trick.

We have only space to point out that as long as South played nothing but diamonds and would make the right guess in case East led the five of spades after taking his diamond late South was sure of his sixth trick and a good score.

Q--The bidding has been: East South West North 1♦ 1♠ Pass 2♠ Pass ? You, South, hold: ♠A J 10 6 5 ♥2 ♦K 4 3 ♣A Q 8 6 What do you do? A--Bid something. We favor going right to four spades, but if you want to be conservative, bid only three.

♠ NORTH 16 ♠ 9 7 ♠ J 7 4 3 ♠ 8 6 2 ♠ Q 9 7 4

♥ WEST ♥ A 3 ♥ A K Q 2 ♥ K Q 10 3 ♥ K J 8

♥ EAST ♥ Q 5 ♥ 10 9 6 5 ♥ A 4 ♥ A 6 5 3 2

♠ SOUTH (D) ♠ K J 10 8 6 4 2 ♠ 8 ♠ J 9 7 5 ♠ 10

East-West vulnerable South West North East 3♠ Dble Pass Pass

Ruling on Juveniles Disputed

By BOB MONROE
NEW YORK (AP) — Legal authorities generally expressed satisfaction today with the Supreme Court's extension of constitutional protections to juveniles. Dissenters were outspoken however, one calling it "a dreadful blow to the concept of juvenile court."

Many judges across the nation said in an Associated Press survey that the ruling would entail no change in their procedures and that their courts were already practicing the principles laid down by the high court Monday.

But Superior Court Judge Lloyd Shoret of Seattle, Wash., said, "I think it is a dreadful blow to the concept of juvenile court. It is a long step in the wrong direction. It means the entire concept of attempted reformation by juvenile courts in effect since 1900 will go out the window."

In its 8 to 1 decision, the Supreme Court held that juveniles, like adults, are entitled to the following Bill of Rights safeguards:

1. Notice of the charges placed against them.
2. The right to have an attorney's assistance.
3. The right to confront and cross-examine complainants and other witnesses.
4. Protection against self-incrimination, including the privilege of remaining silent.
5. The right to a transcript of the proceedings.
6. The right to have the case reviewed in higher courts.

Shoret was most unhappy over point 2—the right to attorney.

"Many more juveniles facing the court will have lawyers. They will be advised to say nothing and many will be turned loose for lack of other evidence," he said.

An opposite view was taken by John Pemberton, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union. In a statement issued here, he said the decision "may well be the most important in the present term of the Supreme Court."

It is important, he explained, "because the law must be seen to practice what it preaches if it is to create incentives in juveniles to rehabilitate themselves."

Geneva Tariff Talks End Successfully; Trade Pact for West

By CARL HARTMAN
GENEVA (AP) — The successful conclusion Monday night to pay $440 beginning July 1, of the long Geneva tariff talks 1968.

Whether the savings will be of President Kennedy's grand design for a partnership between America and Europe.

Walter Hallstein, chief executive of the European Common to consumers. All pass through Market, had predicted: "Only the hands of dealers, wholesale when it is united will Europe be strong enough to assume the rights and obligations of a full guide, these businessmen will and equal partner and so determine its own destiny. The Kennedy Round is the first example of this policy in practice. With these negotiations the economic dialogue of the continents has been opened."

The picture will not emerge exactly as President Kennedy saw it. But after five years of negotiations the Kennedy Round has done a good deal of what it set out to do.

The United States and the Common Market have emerged as the world's two great trading units. What they decide determines the commercial policy of the non-Communist world.

The Common Market has spoken successfully for all six member countries: President Charles de Gaulle's France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

While the agreed tariff cuts will average 33 to 35 per cent in some 80 nations, many tariffs will be cut 50 per cent over a period of five years.

A $5,000 Italian sports car now pays $325 duty in the United States. Beginning the first of next year, $325 will be knocked off.

Greek Humor Prevails Despite Takeover of Government by Army

By GERALD MILLER
ATHENS (AP) — In a joke making the rounds in Athens, a Greek standing in a crowded bus asks the man next to him: "Excuse me, sir, is your father an army officer?"

"No."

"Possibly an uncle?"

"No."

"I'm sorry to bother you this way, but is anyone in your family an army officer?"

"No."

"Well, in that case, get the hell off my foot."

The military dictatorship which took over Greece April 21 is stepping on a lot of feet, but there is a striking lack of complaint.

Much of this is obviously due to fear.

Despite the efforts of the regime to present itself as a paternal protector seeking to bring order and a sense of decency and purpose into national life, everyone knows the government has absolute power.

"We are not executioners," Gen. Gregory Spantidakis, the deputy premier and defense minister, said recently. But they could be if they wanted to. There is no one to prevent it.

Yet there is evident a general sense of accommodation to what has befallen Greece — at least for now.

Many Greeks display relief that the coup went off as painlessly as it did — and that nothing worse happened.

"It's quiet, eh?" one often hears. "That's good. Let's hope it stays that way."

It is indeed quiet. So quiet for Greece in this balmy sunny time of year that something seems strangely missing.

The action is missing, the clamor and hubbub, the outspoken political controversies, the banners, the violent polemics, the demonstrations, the rowdy public rallies that would be taking place if the country were not under a dictatorship that prevented the elections scheduled for May 28.

A first-time visitor would hardly suspect a dictatorship was in force.

The government has made a big show of censoring the local

Hong Kong Trial Hit by Rioting

By FORREST EDWARDS
HONG KONG (AP) — Hundreds of Chinese chanting quotations from Mao Tse-tung forced a Hong Kong court today to adjourn the trial of Chinese arrested in last week's Communist riots.

Huge anti-British demonstrations were reported in Peking and Canton.

British colonial officials put 20,000 police and troops on alert after the Chinese government accused them of "fascist atrocities" in quelling three days of rioting that stemmed from a strike of factory workers over wages and unemployment.

Peking's note to the British government in London demanded the release of nearly 400 Chinese arrested during the rioting in a Kowloon industrial district.

British authorities in London had no immediate comment.

About 50 Chinese spectators crowded into one small courtroom where some of those arrested go on trial today. The crowd chanted from Mao's works while 300 Chinese jamming the corridors stamped their feet in unison and shouted for the release of the defendants.

Unable to restore order, Magistrate D. A. Davies adjourned court and returned the defendants to a cell block in the building.

About 250 of those arrested in the riots already have pleaded guilty and been sentenced to jail terms ranging from one to 18 months.

The Communist New China News Agency reported that more than 40,000 Red Guards, revolutionary workers and government officials demonstrated against the British in Canton, South China's chief city, while another huge demonstration filled the street outside the British Embassy in Peking.

In addition to demanding the release of those arrested, Peking's note to London demanded punishment for those responsible for the "sanguinary atrocities," apologies and compensation to those injured or arrested in the rioting and guarantees against similar incidents in the future.

The demands were similar to those Red China made on Portugal after rioting rocked the Portuguese colony of Macao, Hong Kong's neighbor on the Chinese mainland.

Peking's note also charged that Britain was allowing the United States to use Hong Kong as a base for its forces in the Vietnam war. This led Hong Kong officials to speculate that China's real aim might be to force Britain to bar U.S. warships, transport and cargo planes and U.S. servicemen from Hong Kong, a favorite leave port for U.S. forces in the Far East.

There is a nagging fear in London that Peking, frustrated over the war in Vietnam and the collapse of other of its international ventures, may have decided to try to loosen the British grip in Hong Kong despite the colony's value as a source of foreign exchange for China.

Picked Bad Man to Try Holdup on

NEW YORK (AP) — Two teen-agers who attempted to hold up a man walking across the Brooklyn Bridge are top candidates for Losers of the Week.

Police said Louis Negron, 17, of Brooklyn, and a 14-year-old companion approached the man Monday and one of them snapped: "Hand over your money."

The victim reached into his pocket but instead of a wallet pulled out a .38-caliber revolver and a badge identifying him as police Deputy Inspector Jules Schemm, a confidential investigator.

China Threat in Vietnam May Be Real

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — As the U. S. forces under Gen. Douglas MacArthur got ready to drive the North Korean invaders back into their own country and follow them there was some fear the Red Chinese might leap into the war on the side of North Korea.

But Dean Acheson, secretary of state under President Harry S. Truman, minimized the chance of the Chinese doing that. They'd be mad to try it and besides, he said, there was a lot of trouble going on inside Red China.

But the Chinese premier, Chou En-lai, said his people would not stand by if the "Western Imperialists" invaded the North. But the U. S. and South Korean forces did invade.

The Chinese plunged into the war — they called their troops volunteers — and the result was an American disaster.

Now the U. S. forces are fighting in South Vietnam. At the moment there is no talk here of American troops invading North Vietnam but American planes have been bombing it steadily and once again Chou En-lai had something to say.

In an interview obtained by Simon Malley and published by the Chicago Daily News, Chou warned that Red China might decide it is necessary to intervene in this war, too, with a horde of so-called volunteers.

Chou said the North Vietnamese could get this help from Red China any time they asked for it. But in his talk with Malley, a U. S. citizen who is a correspondent for some African newspapers, Chou said China might barge in on its own under some other circumstances.

He said the Chinese would intervene if the Americans invaded North Vietnam and the Chinese considered this a threat to their own security or if the Americans and Soviets tried to force North Vietnam into what he called a sell-out peace.

No U. S. official so far this time has attempted to minimize the danger implicit in Chou's words even though China, as in the Korean days, is having a lot

2 Arkansans Listed in War Dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Defense Monday released the names of 97 U.S. servicemen killed in action in Vietnam. The list included two Arkansans.

Army Staff Sgt. Willie C. Pendergrass was among those listed. He was the son of Mrs. Willie H. Pendergrass, of Gravelly. The list also included Marine Corps Lance Cpl. Calvin A. Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Halliwill of Jacksonville.

Johnson Plot Uncovered in Philippines

MANILA (AP) — President Johnson and the other government leaders at the seven-nation Manila summit conference on Vietnam last October were kept under "constant surveillance" because of a Communist assassination plot that was uncovered shortly before the meeting, a Philippine presidential spokesman said today.

The spokesman was commenting on a report in Look magazine quoting President Ferdinand E. Marcos as saying that he, President Johnson and South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky were the chief targets of the Communists.

In earlier comments to newsmen here regarding the plot, Marcos said several arrests were made at the time. He did not elaborate, and his spokesman today said no further details were available on the Red plan or the military intelligence action that broke it up.

DeGaulle Threatens Britain Market Bid Due to War Support

DeGaulle Is Facing Left Wing Strike

By STEPHENS BROENING
PARIS (AP) — With a nationwide general strike hanging over his head, President Charles de Gaulle is expected to outline his case at his semi-annual news conference for his government's request for emergency legislative powers.

The president was certain to try to dull the opposition of the French left to his government's attempt to legislate by decree on economic and social matters until Nov. 1.

Since defense and foreign policy are the private preserves of the presidency, De Gaulle is asking the new National Assembly to yield its only important areas of control and in effect suspend itself from office before it has had an opportunity to warm the assembly benches.

An electorate increasingly restless about the sluggishness of wages and social benefits chose an assembly that is nearly evenly divided between the Gaullists and their allies and opposition parties of the left and center.

Communist, Socialist and Catholic labor unions have called a 24-hour general strike Wednesday to protest the government's request for emergency powers.

The general strike, the first on a frankly political basis in 29 years, coincides with the opening of assembly debate on the government's emergency powers bill.

Strike leaders made a special attempt to block out De Gaulle's news conference, ordering journalists, printers and other newspaper workers to start their strike late this afternoon so there will be no Wednesday papers. The government radio and television networks will carry the news conference.

Another matter expected to draw comment from the president is the British application for membership in the European Common Market.

De Gaulle vetoed the first British bid at a news conference Jan. 14, 1963, saying Britain had not proved sufficiently European to enter the continental community.

Carmichael Dropped by Race Group

By DON MCKEE

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Indications are that the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee will shift back into its traditional role of undramatic political organizing with a new emphasis on economic force after a year under "black power" symbol Stokely Carmichael.

Carmichael was replaced as SNCC's national chairman last week by H. Rap Brown, 23, the Alabama field director, in elections by the organization's staff in Atlanta.

Carmichael, 26, who won an internal power struggle a year ago to take the chairmanship, apparently gave up the post without a fight. He had said long before the staff meeting he wanted to step aside.

None of the SNCC leaders would give details of the week-long staff meeting. But neither Carmichael nor other members indicated there was any serious contest. Carmichael, in fact, showed plainly that Brown had his blessing.

At a news conference, Brown said the SNCC philosophy would be along the same line articulated by Carmichael. Brown's prepared statement reflected Carmichael's views, calling for nationwide antidraft program and the building of political and economic forces among Negroes.

But there was perhaps a hint of a difference. Brown spoke of "a programmatic approach," apparently indicating more actual planning and concrete programs as opposed to considerable emphasis on speaking tours by Carmichael.

Carmichael himself said he would not continue his speech-making campaign. Several SNCC sources said Carmichael would join in a summer drive for home rule in Washington, D.C. Carmichael said his assignment would be decided by SNCC's central committee.

"I think Carmichael will continue to serve as a spokesman,"

Silent on Any Meeting With Johnson

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle, in an obvious reference to the Vietnamese war, called today for an end "to the scandal of foreign intervention in Asia."

The French president, in answer to a news conference question about French policy toward the war, told the hundreds of newsmen in the Elysee ballroom France would continue to oppose foreign — meaning American — involvement in Vietnam.

"The scandal of foreign intervention in Asia must cease; that is the path the government intends to follow," he declared.

By ALLAN PRIAULX

United Press International

PARIS (UPI) — French President Charles de Gaulle today said Britain's backing of the United States war efforts in Vietnam may keep her out of the Common Market.

De Gaulle told newsmen at his first news conference of the year that he would not veto the British attempt to enter the European community. But he added, Britain's own "continued insularity" might keep her out of the six-nation economic bloc.

The 76-year-old president did not directly attack the United States for the war in Vietnam. But he refused to answer the question of an American journalist on whether he was prepared to meet President Johnson.

De Gaulle spent most of his 76-minute talk to about 600 newsmen in the Grand Ballroom of the presidential Elysee Palace speaking of his own domestic policies.

He spoke against a backdrop of mounting domestic strife. A 24-hour general strike was starting tonight with a cut off of electrical supplies to industrial consumers.

The strike, in which an estimated 10 million workers were expected to take part, was in protest against a bill which would give De Gaulle special powers to rule without Parliament for six months.

Printers walked off the job earlier in the day and refused to publish today's newspapers. But De Gaulle's remarks were broadcast by radio and television.

De Gaulle ranged the domestic and international fields, denouncing opposition factions at home he said were trying to force him out of office and the United States and Britain abroad for trying to set up "inflationary world monetary schemes."

The French President said the six Common Market nations — France, Italy, West Germany, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg — are joining ever closer while Britain clings to her "special links" with the United States.

"The strengthening of the European spirit perhaps is due also to the threat raised by the technological field by the dominating spirit of the Americans," he said.

"But it is above all in the field of defense that the

Nurse Shortage to Be Discussed

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Dr. E. J. Easley, director of the mental health division of the State Health Department, said Monday the problem of the shortage of trained nurses will probably be discussed at the annual meeting of the Arkansas Public Health Association today.

Easley said the subject was not among the scheduled topics.

"I'm sure the problem will be discussed in the individual meetings of medical directors, nurses and association officers," said Easley. "All of us know how short we are."

Remember The Median Age

Still in a mild state of shock, the city editor of this newspaper told us the other day that a young reporter had professed complete ignorance of the identity or achievements of Charles A. Lindbergh. "He'd never even heard of him!" said our friend, with a shudder of disbelief. It is astounding, to be sure, but not inexplicable. The median age in the United States today is 28 years, which means that nearly 100 million Americans are below that age.

Most Americans cannot remember any President before Franklin D. Roosevelt and millions have no recollection of him. A majority of our citizens cannot remember Pearl Harbor, or any of the events that led up to it. A very large section of the people is without first-hand recollection of the great depression, or knows what you mean when you say that a certain fellow "used to sell apples on street corners."

Reflection on these and associated facts about the age of some of our readers brings with it the admonishment to be cautious in our allusions and in our assumptions about the background of our readership. We have unquestionably assumed far too much in this respect on some occasions. Prohibition, the five-cent bus fare, the two-cent postage stamp, the Teapot Dome scandal and hundreds of other events and institutions of the past are utterly without meaning for millions of adults — and of course for other millions reaching for adulthood. — Huntington (W. Va.) Herald-Dispatch

Boy of Eleven Shows The Way

Youngsters sometimes do things that make their elders proud, admiring, and perhaps a little ashamed of themselves.

Takes the case of Michael Hobbs. He is a Jefferson County boy of 11 who lives out on Johnsonsontown Road. Last Saturday he saw a little girl of six or seven floundering in the dangerously swollen waters of Mill Creek. He didn't even know who she was. He had learned how to swim in the backyard pool at home, however, so he took off his shoes, plunged into the swift current, and towed the child to safety.

His act was performed without the least hesitation, as a completely natural response to seeing a helpless person in danger. Michael is too young to know about the distressing stories that come out in the papers, telling of adults hearing women screaming for help, or seeing men being brutally beaten, without even making a move to call a policeman. Michael Hobbs probably never thought of himself as a hero. He has given an example of instant heroism, however, that would do credit to a man twice his age. — Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal
